Animation with Fun Workshop

5 August 2006 saw the HKFA brimming over with joy and laughter. ‘Old Master Cute’ had a busy day walking around to take photos with his fans, turning the Archive into a fun-filled playground! Highlight of the day was the ‘Animation with Fun Workshop’, which drew flocks of participants, both children and children-at-heart, to try their hands at animation production with the assistance of veteran animators Yu Man-fai and Dick Wong. Stop-motion animation is the result of combining separate pieces of drawings into a moving image, but they are in fact not supposed to emerge in sequence—one should draw the first and the last, and flesh out those in between afterwards. They are finally put together with computer technology to achieve a smooth flow of action. It took no more than a while before everyone came up with their first-ever mini-animation, with their fun doubled by a mega view of their work on the screen in the Exhibition Hall.
